Where water falls and history calls

Discover the place where “Water Falls and History Calls” in the Pendleton District of South Carolina, along Interstate 85 midway between Atlanta and Charlotte. The natural beauty and rich history and culture of Anderson, Oconee, and Pickens Counties in the northwest corner of South Carolina’s Upstate offers mountain peaks, waterfalls, rolling hills, lakes, and streams that create a picturesque backdrop for exploration and recreation.

Wander the friendly cities and towns of the Pendleton District and see history come alive as you learn about the places and people of the region’s past. Tour eighteenth and nineteenth-century homes or walk through the collections of area museums.

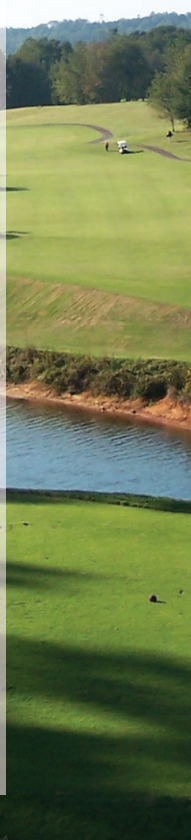

Enjoy dining and shopping in one of the Pendleton District’s many small towns or vibrant cities. Stay overnight in a hotel, bed & breakfast inn, cabin, or campground.

Whether you’re looking for a day of adventure, a family outing, a quiet place to admire artwork or an opportunity to learn more about our state history, you are sure to find it in the Pendleton District.

Our regional tourism office and visitors center at Hunter’s Store on the Village Green in the town of Pendleton can assist as you plan a trip for your family or your group.
